

The Bull, the Lion, the Eagle and the Man with Wings

© Copyright 2013 – Reg Down

All rights reserved. No part of this publication, in part or in whole may be reproduced, transmitted or utilized in any form, without the permission of the author, except for brief quotations in critical articles and reviews.

Once, a bull, a lion and an eagle were fighting. The eagle clawed the lion, the lion bit the bull and the bull butted the eagle.

A man with wings came along.

“Stop fighting!” he commanded—but the animals wouldn’t listen.

So he threw them into a lake and drank it.

“That’ll take care of you!” he said—and it did, except, when he tried to fly, he found he’d lost his wings.

